How the Century Came to Wanamaker's

The club plan of selling books was pioneered and perfected by us. During the last four years we have distributed through the Wanamaker Book Clubs special editions of three important works-at prices very much below the usual. Each was a more-thanexpected success - which showed us you wanted them-wanted equally the books, the price saving and the comfortable payments.

In selecting a work for this year's book club, a popular demand made it clear to us that what was wanted was a dictionary and cyclopedia. The question of choice was a simple one, for the Wanamaker plan admits of selling only the one best work of its kind. That meant the Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia and Atlas. But there's another part to the Wanamaker plan of book-selling: After the one best is selected, the price must be a popular one; and the cost of producing the Century had made it necessarily a rich man's work. Negotiations were at once begun, however, for we had some strong arguments in favor of a radical price reduction, notably the immense distributing power | them though, this way:of our book store-then the vast popularizing influence in favor of the Century that our wide distribution of the volumes would procure for it-and no less than these the fact that the Wanamaker name was guarantee enough for quality not to permit an impression of cheapness to attach itself to the work on account of a cheaper price on the volumes through the Wanamaker Club.

This is the Result of the Negotiations

We have secured an entire edition of this "authority of authorities;" secured it in its newly revised and completed form, 10 volumes, with all departments thoroughly gone over, added to, corrected and brought down to date-secured it, too, at such a figure as enables us, through the Wanamaker Century Club, to cut the price squarely in two, and not only that, but the half price that's left has been divided into monthly installments that figure only 10 cents a day, while the complete set can be delivered to members on receipt of only $1.00.

It is expressly stipulated in our agreement that no more sets will be furnished us after our one edition is exhausted. Some of our friends last year delayed-prices were raised -and there was disappointment. WE AD-VISE YOUR JOINING THE WANA-MAKER CENTURY CLUB TO-DAY. We will tell you how if you can call at the store; or if that is not convenient, cut off the professors, lawyers, savants, physicians-every class of coupon at the UPPER right hand corner of this page and mail it to us. It will serve as

Why the Century is a Daily necessity to YOU.

SOMETHING OF THE PRACTICAL SIDE OF THESE VOLUMES.

We will have to guess a little as to just what part of the Century will MOST interest you. We might say, and truthfully, that it is the best medical dictionary in the world; but perhaps you are not interested in medi-

It is far superior to any botanical dictionary ever before published; but possibly the study of flowers and plants does not appeal to you.

What we would like you to know first is that the work is the one absolute authority on all matters of words and their uses. That interests you, of course; but that is only what you have a right to expect from the greatest dictionary and cyclopedia ever

What we would like to show you is the way in which the volumes help their owners in every station in life daily, hourly-in ways hard to understand until experienced. It is not easy to do this on paper. The books themselves show very quickly-very clearly.

The Man with No Time to Spare turns to its pages, confident of instant information-full and complete-about the subject he needs prompting on. IS THERE A CHILD IN YOUR HOUSE?

And does he ask questions? Wise parents encourage child's inquiries, but the answering is tiresome some-

Much has been said and written about the "question habit" in children. We have suggestions to go hand in hand with that theory. After the question habit has been encouraged, teach your child the "Century Hahit," which answers his every question; answers it clearly so clearly that even the child can understand it of himself with little, if any, explanation by you; answers it more accurately, if you will pardon us, than you could do yourself in most cases, and more quickly. And yet the children do not regard The Century as a study book, rather as one of their greatest entertainers, as hundreds of letters received from parents testify.

About the Work Itself—Its Making and Its Scope.

No work in the world of bookmaking was so carefully planned or so ably executed as the Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia and Atlas. The story of it is interesting. It begins over sixteen years ago, when it was jects. Nowhere else can you find BIO- decided to produce a reference work along entirely original lines that should be complete and authoritative-absolutely; not following the mistakes or methods of its predecessors. Each word and fact that went into the volumes was traced back and proven, in order that the work, in its minutest details, should be the "authority of authorities." The task was a gigantic one, involving the incessant labor of more than five hundred of the world's greatest specialists.

Each item as it was received was passed upon by a committee of experts and subjected to the closest scrutiny and the most thorough States or Christendom, or furnish SUCH A search. Money was expended without stint in exchange for truth. When all was gotten DATE MAPS. No other work gi es the together a system of classification was devised, as comprehensive as it was simple, tions and the late applications of electricity and a radical departure from the methods of heretofore. The illustrations were produced with as much care as the reading matter, every one of the more than eight thousand plates being absolutely correct as well as superbly executed.

Finally, when all the ten volumes were completed according to the original plan, they were revised throughout, brought down to date, with much new matter added. This revision has just been finished, and it is this newly revised edition that is being sold through the Wanamaker Club.

The new "Century" consists of ten handsome royal quarto volumes, which contain about 8,500 royal quarto pages, copiously illustrated wherever an illustration could be used to make anything clearer.
